Dear Jeremy,

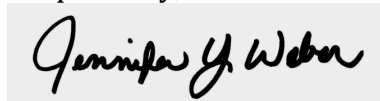

It was wonderful to observe the film lecture you prepared for the Dance Composition students on Thursday, February 29th. I learned so much about the basics of film and I greatly appreciated how you prepared for this lecture. I was also appreciative of how you engaged with the students who were new to you.

It is clear that you are passionate about film and that you are greatly knowledgeable. You expertly prepared the information in a logical and digestible manner. You provided ample examples and engaged the students in active learning by having them identify concepts in the examples you shared. I noticed that you were genuine and conversational from the start. Even though there was a lot of information you prepared, you stopped frequently to check in with students, ask for questions, and engage in dialogue.

These students were new to you, but you did not hesitate to connect with them and relate the information to their interests. You listened carefully and related information later in the lecture to comments made early on in class, this is an admirable skill to hone as an educator. You welcomed the dance students into the space and encouraged them to sign up for future film classes based on what perked their interest. The students from this class talked about your lecture class periods after. Some of them sought out the dance and film offering at the conference we attended in Ogden, UT because of your class. You also genuinely expressed interest in seeing their finished product.

Jeremy, you are an asset to this institution and your students are lucky to have you in class. You are generous in sharing your knowledge, experience, and in collaborating. I appreciate that you took the time to prepare this lecture and work with my students. I look forward to many future collaborations.

Respectfully,

Jennifer Weber
